

Name of Researcher:	Lozada, Carlos
Citizenship of Researcher:	Latin America
Telephone Number of Researcher:	202-939-2240 / Fax: 202-483-1840
E-mail Address of Researcher:	clozada@ceip.org
Employer or Sponsoring Organization:	FOREIGN POLICY magazine
Address of Employer or Sponsoring Organization:
Title of Project:	Latin America
Type of Product (e.g., Book, Paper, Documentary Film, Serial Article):	Paper
Précis of 100 Words or Less:	No miracle cure has ended Latin America's turmoil. Latin leaders need to find homegrown solutions. One place to start is more economic reform, not less, and less rule of law, not more. Many observers have seized upon the region's recent dismal economic record to argue that Latin America's market reforms of the 1990s have failed miserably. However, the problem in Latin America might not be too much reform, but too little. Gazing across Latin America today, one is more likely to see helpless, ineffective heads of state, fettered by newly assertive legislatures and power-hungry local leaders. But do not anticipate a new wave of military coups in Latin America. Instead, civilian protests have become a more popular means for "regime change" in the region. Corruption in Latin America seems worse now only because the region's democratic reforms have helped uncover more wrongdoing. Nevertheless, anticorruption measures are multiplying in light of popular discontent.
Start Date:
Projected Completion Date:
Presentation or Publication Date:	3-4. 2003
Presentation or Publication Venue:	Foreign Policy
Original Language:	English

Projected Date of Availability in English:
Relation to Other Efforts, Follow-on Projects (If Any):
Available in Hardcopy or Electronically (Y/N):	Yes